Carla Carfora, from Hopkinsville, Kentucky, was not only a strong competitor at the Pinto World Show but also at all the beauty pageants she attended. Currently, Carla is titled Miss Paulina Bodee Queen. From the day she was born, she has always been around home show with her mom, Liz. Rodeo queen is something she can remember; she has always getting dolled up with makeup and dresses.

Carfora said, “My biggest supporter as pageants, in the arena is my mom and grandmother, Nancy Peladi who owns Sari Entertainment, the hole I showed.

At 15 years old, Carla was a Biz in the library locally for Little Marley for horse pageants she attended.

The pageants that Carfora competes in requires her to take part in three separate categories: modeling, group and western wear. However, when she competes for horse pageants, they require western wear to be added into the categories. Carfora stated, “My favorite pageants I have done is my current title, Miss Paulina Bodee Queen. I really loved this pageant as it was a great surge from horse showing and beauty pageants.”

From the love of pageants, Carfora learned to grow to become a strong, outspoken person. Carfora took the knowledge she learned from the pageants and brought it into the show ring to become a more confident horse.

Carfora said, “Becoming a beauty pageant queen really made me open doors for me to meet so many amazing people in the agriculture community and rodeos to horse shows and all in-between.” Through the four years she spent college, she attended and collegiate competition team.

At this year’s Pinto World Show, Carfora wins three World Champions in the Novice, Disciplined Rail, horsemanship, and equitation. “I’d really like to thank the staff of Pinto Association on beauty pageants. Two years later, Carla’s full-time job as a beauty pageant coach for girls in the 7-12 age bracket, because of their stage presence.

Carfora has been around horses since she was as young as she can remember she has always loved the fairs and rodeos to horse shows and all in-between.” Through the four years she spent college, she attended and collegiate competition team.
